Third Is RescuedFairfax Police List Two Suicides
In County Over The Week End

Two suicides were reported last weekend by Fairfax County police.

Forty-three-year-old Harry J. Dixon, a Ft. Belvoir sanitary engineering department employee, shot and killed himself with a .410 gauge shotgun on Sunday afternoon, police reported.

The victim was found in his home by his 75-year-old father,

Charles L. Dixon. Police said the younger Dixon lost his left leg in a motorcycle accident when he was 19 years old. They said he apparently became despondent while reading a magazine describing the situation of a similarly handicapped woman, according to the investigating officers.

An intensive weekend search at Great Falls failed to uncover the body of a 32-year-old Arlington man who, with his wife, jumped into the swirling waters of the Potomac River Saturday afternoon.

The victim was James A. Woodbury, of 1412 Hartford St. Eyewitnesses saw the couple leap into the river at the falls. His wife, also 32, was rescued. Police quoted her as stating they decided to "do away with ourselves" because of "work pressure" on the husband. He was an employee of Central Intelligence Agency.
